Tim Etchells & Vlatka Horvat: What Can Be Seen

8 Feb – 7 May 2017
Millennium Gallery

What Can Be Seen is a new collaborative project by internationally renowned artists Tim Etchells and Vlatka Horvat reimagining Sheffield's diverse museum collections.

Presenting new groupings of objects from the city's collections and the materials used to catalogue, maintain and preserve them, the exhibition explores how we attempt to understand the world through history, science, art, narrative and the act of collecting itself. In the playful, unexpected associations Etchells and Horvat create, the mysterious, unusual, banal and everyday are reframed in each other's company, inviting viewers to see them anew.

Stories from the East: The Grice Ivories

11 Mar – 9 July 2017
Weston Park Museum

Discover a spellbinding world of myth and legend as some of the UK's finest examples of Chinese craftsmanship go on show at Weston Park Museum this spring.

This is the largest display of these remarkable hand-carvings in over 15 years and will look at the tales, figures and traditions that inspired them.

This exhibition will also explore how Dr John Grice's extraordinary collection of ivories came to Sheffield in the 1930s, as well as the history and impact of the ivory trade.

Protest Lab

From 18 Mar 2017
Millennium Gallery

Protest Lab is an experimental, vocal, social space where views are shared and ideas are challenged. Find out more about the history of protest and activism in Sheffield, tell us about the causes that matter to you and help us shape our forthcoming programme of exhibitions and events marking the 100th anniversary of the Representation of the People Act in 2018.

Arrivals: Making Sheffield Home

Until 12 Feb 2017
Weston Park Museum

Arrivals celebrates the remarkable stories of Sheffield residents who have travelled from across the globe to make a home in the city. A unique and moving tribute to Sheffield's richly diverse population, this striking series of images by photographer Jeremy Abrahams brings together portraits of people who arrived in the city between 1945 and 2016.

Arrivals is supported by

This exhibition has been organised in partnership with the Victoria and Albert Museum, made possible with Art Fund support and the assistance of the Foyle Foundation.

Street View: Photographs of Urban Life

Until 11 Mar 2017
Graves Gallery

The ever-present backdrop to our daily lives, the street has been a consistent feature in photography throughout the 20th century. Street View brings together work by Henri Cartier-Bresson, Bill Brandt, Roger Mayne and more to explore how photographers have captured street life on camera. See images drawn from Sheffield's own collection alongside key loans from the V&A and the Hyman Collection.

Dig deeper into Sheffield's story with new events for adults at Weston Park Museum

From January, you'll be able to find out even more about the collections on show in our new displays and galleries at Weston Park Museum as we introduce a brand new programme of events for adults.

Our new regular Tuesday sessions will include talks and gallery tours, hands-on workshops and events inspired by the objects and artwork on display, as well our new monthly Museum Book Club – see our Events listings over the page for more info.

These new regular adult events join our popular programme of activities for children and families – to explore our full event line-up visit museums-sheffield.org.uk.

Museums come alive at night with Live Lates

When we open the doors to one of our Live Lates, expect the unexpected.

So far, our after-hours events have spanned everything from live art extravaganzas, burlesque, and digital coding raves to mass crafting and Egyptian afterlife parties, not to mention hours of live music.

If you've not been before, now's the perfect time to give them a try. First up in February, 1967 celebrates a LGBT landmark year, followed by a very special event curated by Sheffield's sonic innovators, Blood Sport – look out for more info on that coming soon.

And there's more in store - keep an eye on our website for details of new Lives Lates throughout the year.
